

Will it fit?

You've found the one, but will your sofa and home be a match made in heaven? Measuring tape at the ready – here's how to make sure

A: Total sofa height

B: Total sofa width

C: Total sofa depth

1. TAKE MEASURE

The important dimensions to note are the height, depth and length of your sofa. The height tends to be the smallest, so going end first on its back is often the easiest way. You can find all the measurements on the product page.

2. SHAPE UP

If it won't slide through hallways, door frames or up and down stairs without wrecking your decor, your oh-so perfect sofa will have nowhere to go. Measure up the narrowest gaps and any obstacles before hitting 'buy'.

3. HIT THE FLOOR

In the room your sofa will be calling home, mark out with masking tape or sheets of newspaper the sofa's size, shape and position to get a feel for how it will sit in the room.

4. GIVE IT SOME SPACE

Make sure you can easily move around the sofa and that it'll work with the other furniture in the room.

Things to think about

- Watch out for low ceilings, bannisters, skirting boards, tight corners and the like that might halt your progress
- Does the door position allow you enough wiggle room? Too near a wall and you might not be able to PIVOT!
- If it has to go in a lift, be sure to measure that up too, paying particular attention to the height
- Sofa beds need about 240cm to fully extend, more if you're planning on walking around the foot of the bed
- Recliners extend to 150-180cm to give you the optimal chilling-out angle
- We do things properly, so our sofas come pretty much fully assembled

On the day

Our expert delivery team really know their stuff, but unfortunately they can't remove any windows/doors/antique rococo roll-top baths etc that might get in the way.

If they can't get your piece in, it'll have to go back in the van – at a cost of £25 – and we'll refund the cost of your sofa.

They also can't move around or remove any furniture for you, unless you've requested our furniture disposal service when you order – if you have, they'll take away your like-for-like sofa.

Once it's in the room, the team will attach the feet, put your sofa in its place and remove all the packaging to be recycled.
